ON THE JOB

From bathrooms to home offices, the one project professionals would tackle in their own homes this spring

Face it — there's always that one room in your home you'd love to totally demolish and redesign. You may want to redo the back splash in your kitchen. Or, in a perfect world, you may get rid of those horrible pink tiles in your bathroom. Sure there's plenty holding you back — budget, time constraints, creating your own design. But what if you were in the home renovation industry?

We asked some top designers and contractors the one project they would tackle in their own homes, and what local resources they would use to get the job done.

This bathroom was the inspiration for a renovation in designer Jason Landau's Briarcliff home.
