Magnificent Mix

The inspiration for Jason Landau's design of this contemporary kitchen began with selecting the Rainforest Brown Marble for the island, which drove the color scheme throughout the space. Cesar Stone awarded this kitchen in this year's annual competition recognizing Landau's application of their man-made quartz into the surrounding countertops and a window casing.

The kitchen's surprise elements include a wine bar that features lit floating glass shelves for entertaining, and separated freezer and refrigeration units. "We did this to break up the large blocks of stainless and keep the kitchen from feeling cold," says Landau.

The layout enables multiple activities. "It's not a huge space, but the footprint is medium and within that we were able to divide the functions of a kitchen into a well flowing space." When a designer is faced with a renovation it poses specific challenges and requires them to reconfigure existing spaces to satisfy the needs of the client. By increasing the efficiencies of prep areas and storage, adding additional amenities, and mixing man-made and natural elements, Jason Landau of Amazing Spaces was able to create a camera-ready kitchen for his client.
